Poetry.

HUMAN LIFE.
"It is a dream, as a vapor that appears for a little time and then vanishes away." - James 1. 14. 11-10

Such is life, how very fleeting!
Tantamount to a summer's day;
Yet it brings us many blessings,
Vapor, like the clouds above us,
Changing ever with the day. 11-10

Such is life, O, how uncertain!
Who can tell the solemn hour
When shall end our pilgrim journey -
Death shall strike with fearful power! 11-10

Such is life, its lights and shadows,
Less or more our days attend;
Yet the time is not far distant
When these things with us shall end. 11-10

Let us then press boldly onward,
Nearer father, nearer love;
Dear each cross, ill we assemble
Where is shed our farewell tear. 11-10

LITERATURE.
LONG AFTERWARDS. 11-10

BY T. G. ARTHUR.
"Your childhood here, Mrs. Lincoln, said one lady to another. 11-10

"I'm sorry," answered the lady to whom the remark was addressed; but the admission of regret was not made with any feeling. 11-10

"Why do you treat her with such a distant reserve, Mrs. Arnold?" I've noticed this number of times. She's an excellent lady. We all like her exceedingly. 11-10

"The eyes of Mrs. Arnold fell to the floor, and her face became grave." I wonder that you do not fancy Mrs. Lincoln. She's a lovely character - an intelligent, so refined, and with such a sweet spirit towards every one. The fault must be in yourself, if there is any natural repulsion. 11-10

"It was an intimate friend who spoke, and the closing sentence was uttered with a smile." 11-10

"In that you may be right," said Mrs. Arnold, half smiling in return. "Then there is a felt repulsion!" 11-10

"I call that singular. To me it seems that you were born for friends. Your tastes and sympathies run in the same direction; and you are interested in the same general subjects. I am sure, if you knew each other as well as I know you both, you would become closely knit together in friendship. I must get you into a nearer relation with Mrs. Lincoln." 11-10

"I would prefer remaining at my present distance," replied Mrs. Arnold. "Why? There must be a reason for this." 11-10

"I don't like her." Mrs. Arnold! I'm surprised to hear you speak so decidedly. Mrs. Lincoln admires you; I've heard her say so, often and wants to know you more intimately than she now does. 11-10

"That she never will, I'm thinking!" Mrs. Arnold's brows began to gather darkly. 11-10

"What's the matter? What do you know about Mrs. Lincoln, that sets her beyond the limit of your friendly acquaintance?" 11-10

"The truth is," said Mrs. Arnold, "I've got an old grudge against her. There was a time when it would not gratify her social pride to call her my friend - and she treated me accordingly. She was a woman when I was a child." 11-10

"Well - go on." Mrs. Arnold had paused, for she was conscious that her voice was losing its steadiness of tone. 11-10

"Perhaps I had as well keep silent," she said. "The subject is not a pleasant one." 11-10

"Go on, now. You have excited my curiosity. I would like to know exactly how you stand with Mrs. Lincoln." 11-10

"There may be pride and weakness in the case," returned Mrs. Arnold. "But no matter. Thus it stands: I was a quick intelligent child, but very sensitive. Mrs. Lincoln visited my mother, and I often met her in the parlor, when company was present. She was a beautiful talker, and it was one of my greatest pleasures to sit and listen. I was really fascinated with her; and I thought her the loveliest lady I had ever seen. One day when she was at our house, I sat listening to the conversation that was passing between her and some other friend of my mother's drinking in I apprehended a great deal more than was imagined, and drinking in with delight. My mother had left the room for some purpose. While she was absent, Mrs. Lincoln, in speaking of prevalent human weakness, quoted a couplet from Pope: 11-10

"The love of Power, however concealed by art, Rules more or less, and glows in every heart." 11-10

"Now I had read largely in Pope, and held in memory a great many of his verse maxims. Every word of this couplet was familiar, and my ear instantly detected one wrong word in the quotation. In my childish order and seriousness I said, looking into Mrs. Lincoln's face: 11-10

"It is reigns, ma'am." 11-10

"Her eyes turned, flashed on me, in an instant, and with an angry face she said: 11-10

"You've forgotten yourself, Miss Part! Children should be seen, not heard." 11-10

"I shall never see or hear of her in the parlor again. I went out, with her cheeks and heart full of pain and bitterness. I was conscious with a fault, and this rebuke so unjustly given - hurt me to a degree that I never would forgive. I never mentioned it to my mother; nor, indeed, in any living soul before this time, and it is over twenty years since the 11-10
